Q: Angular 4: Accessing components property value when changing the value of the same property I need to update my components property value in parent component from child component when the property value in child component is changed.

```
import { Component, OnInit, AfterViewInit } from '@angular/core'; @Component({ selector: 'app-myComponent', templateUrl: './myComponent.component.html', styleUrls: ['./myComponent.component.scss'] }) export class MyComponent implements OnInit { public myValue: string = 'value1'; ngOnInit() { // How to access this.myValue in parent component from myComponent when the value in child component is changed? } }
```

```
@Component({ selector: 'app-myComponent', templateUrl: './myComponent.component.html', styleUrls: ['./myComponent.component.scss'] }) export class MyComponent implements OnInit { public myValue: string = 'value1'; // Watch for changes of value and update parent component public ngOnChanges() { if (this.myValue === 'value2') { console.log(this.myValue); } } }
```

Also, in your parent component where you want to consume the value use

```
// Watch for changes of value and update parent component public ngOnChanges() { console.log(this.myValue); }
```

In your parent component you can even print the changes. This is a very useful for keeping track of state on your app. Another approach would be having two way binding, but that's another story.
