Published in: No title.Blue Mountain Peaks Trail L-R: NOTE: Not all trails have this much climbing. Many trails will have a great deal of climbing, a few will have only moderate/some steep (10+), most will have a moderate amount of climbing, a few will have minimal or none Overview Blue Mountain Peaks is a non-motorized, looping trail that passes through the mountains of east Burley, Idaho. The terrain is difficult. The trail is best suited for experienced hikers and bicyclists who are willing to take on some challenges. The elevation gain is moderate. The trail is first headed towards the fork with the Blue Mountain Creek Trail and with that, a nice spruce forest. The trail then joins the Jackson Fork Trail and proceeds through more spruce trees with several switchbacks. You then come upon a log and trail that head north through a pleasant area. The terrain is now very steep. You proceed up a hill and reach a pass with panoramic views and then come into a beautiful area with stream crossings, a talus field and trees. The trail heads into more spruce trees, and
